

Do you want to start a private practice?
Have you ever thought of starting a non-profit organization?
Then you might be a social work entrepreneur.

Would you like help understanding how you might turn your idea into a viable social venture? Then join us for a business and entrepreneurship planning course developed especially for social workers by the business development experts at the Build Institute in Detroit.

If you've ever contemplated starting a business or organization with a social mission purpose, this class is for you. Our curriculum is a learner-centered, hands-on and activity based, so you'll be doing as much as you'll be listening. You'll leave the class with a completed business plan, and the knowledge and confidence to take your idea to the next level.
